Sherman Reservoir, located near Loup City, Nebraska, is a popular fishing destination, known for its variety of fish, including walleye, crappie, catfish, white bass, and northern pike. Anglers can expect excellent walleye fishing from May to June, with peak catches near points and drop-offs. White bass fishing also has two peaks, one in April-May and another in mid-summer, with catches near gizzard shad schools or under lights at night. Crappie fishing is particularly good in May when the reservoir fills and coves and bays offer flooded habitat.
